EasyJet founder's £5m cry for help

THE founder of easyJet has promised to pay £5million to any whistleblower who can help him stop the company's multi-billion pound deal to buy more than 100 new planes.

Sir Stelios Haji-Ioannou said he is "willing" to pay the cash out of his own pocket. The Haji-Ioannou family has been using its 34 per cent of the shares in the budget airline to put pressure on top bosses, including chief executive Johan Lundgren.

Sir Stelios wants Mr Lundgren to cancel a £4.5billion deal to buy 107 planes from European aircraft maker Airbus.
