'Easy' victory in airline row

EASYJET founder Sir Stelios Haji-Ioannou claimed victory in a legal row with China's national airline over the use of the word "easy" in its advertising.

Air China launched a Beijing-Frankfurt service in May 2017, described as the "Easy Way" to visit Europe for millions of Chinese tourists. But Sir Stelios took issue, claiming it was a breach of copyright for his EasyGroup of brands.

His firm said: "Following a brief exchange of solicitors' letters, Air China has agreed to stop use of the wording."
